In ancient times the soil on Limnos was said to have medicinal properties and was used to treat snakebites and even plague as recently as the 16th century. Still, the most remarkable finding once buried in the ground is the Temple of Kavirio, a sacred site dedicated to the mythical sons of Hephaestus. Being the Greek god of blacksmiths, he is often depicted holding a hammer. As you walk among ruins of the temple and adjacent buildings, you will see inscriptions that detail how the temple was constructed. You will also visit a memorial and cemetery near the extraordinary natural harbor of Moudros. It commemorates the mostly British and Anzac soldiers that died in the Gallipoli Campaign during World War I.
