Duration: 6.00 Hrs Price: $139.00

OVERVIEW

View some ingenious ways that Cyprus is protecting its environment by using compressed earth as a building material and by harnessing wind power. While touring a manufacturer of compressed-earth blocks, you may be surprised by the many benefits of these sustainable construction materials, which are often made on site from excavated soil. Their carbon footprint is 20 times less than that of fired bricks, and the natural earth blocks cost half as much. Wind power is also being used extensively on Cyprus as you will discover at a wind farm in Koshi. Its non-polluting turbines provide sustainable energy at a low cost, unlike fossil fuels.

Cyprus values traditional ways as much as its natural resources, a fact that will be confirmed at the house of a 19th-century Orthodox monk and painter. In the adjoining creamery, you will see how halloumi and anari cheeses are made and sample them. Lunch follows at a nearby tavern.
